

The world seems to feature never-ending novelty

But everything in that sea of complexity is similar to everything else

A relatively small number of atoms of meaning

Everything around you is a recombination of them

A few seeds,
endless variation